Addicted Art Gallery is delighted to present a scorching new photography series, Greek Summer, by Florian Innerkofler. This captivating collection will transport you to the idyllic island of Crete, where the crystal-clear waters and sun-kissed landscapes will leave you breathless. So, buckle up and get ready for Greek Summer.

ISLAND CURVES, CRETE, GREECE

Greek Summer is an ode to the stunning island of Crete, the largest of the Greek islands. This series captures the island's ruggedness and harshness, contrasted with the female form's softness, beauty, and sensuality. Florian's memories of his trip to Crete come to life, with each colour evoking a particular emotion and every photo narrating a unique story. The series' opening piece, "Island Curves," showcases a stone beach, a winding road, and a bohemian female beauty covered in an abstract version of the Greek flag, inviting viewers to visit this magnificent island and bring a piece of it back home.

COOL OFF, CRETE, GREECE

In the words of the artist... "Crete always fascinated me. Being the biggest of the Greek Islands and the centre of Europe's first advanced civilisation, the Minoans, around 2000BC, I was always drawn to this historic land. "What a beauty! The land, the high majestic mountain ranges forming deep gorges, rivers and the most secluded bays which open up to the vast salty ocean.

AFTERNOON IN MATALA, CRETE, GREECE

"When visiting the island years back, we circled the western half by motorcycle and experienced the ruggedness of this historic island. There were no maps, plan, or destination, only our curiosity to explore, create and capture unforgettable moments where the island's roughness, dryness, and harshness stands in hard contrast to the beauty and softness of the female body. "This series is summed up by; sun, heat, salty skin and sensuality, along with the cool reset of diving into the Mediterranean Sea."
